A DEFINITION OF DUTY

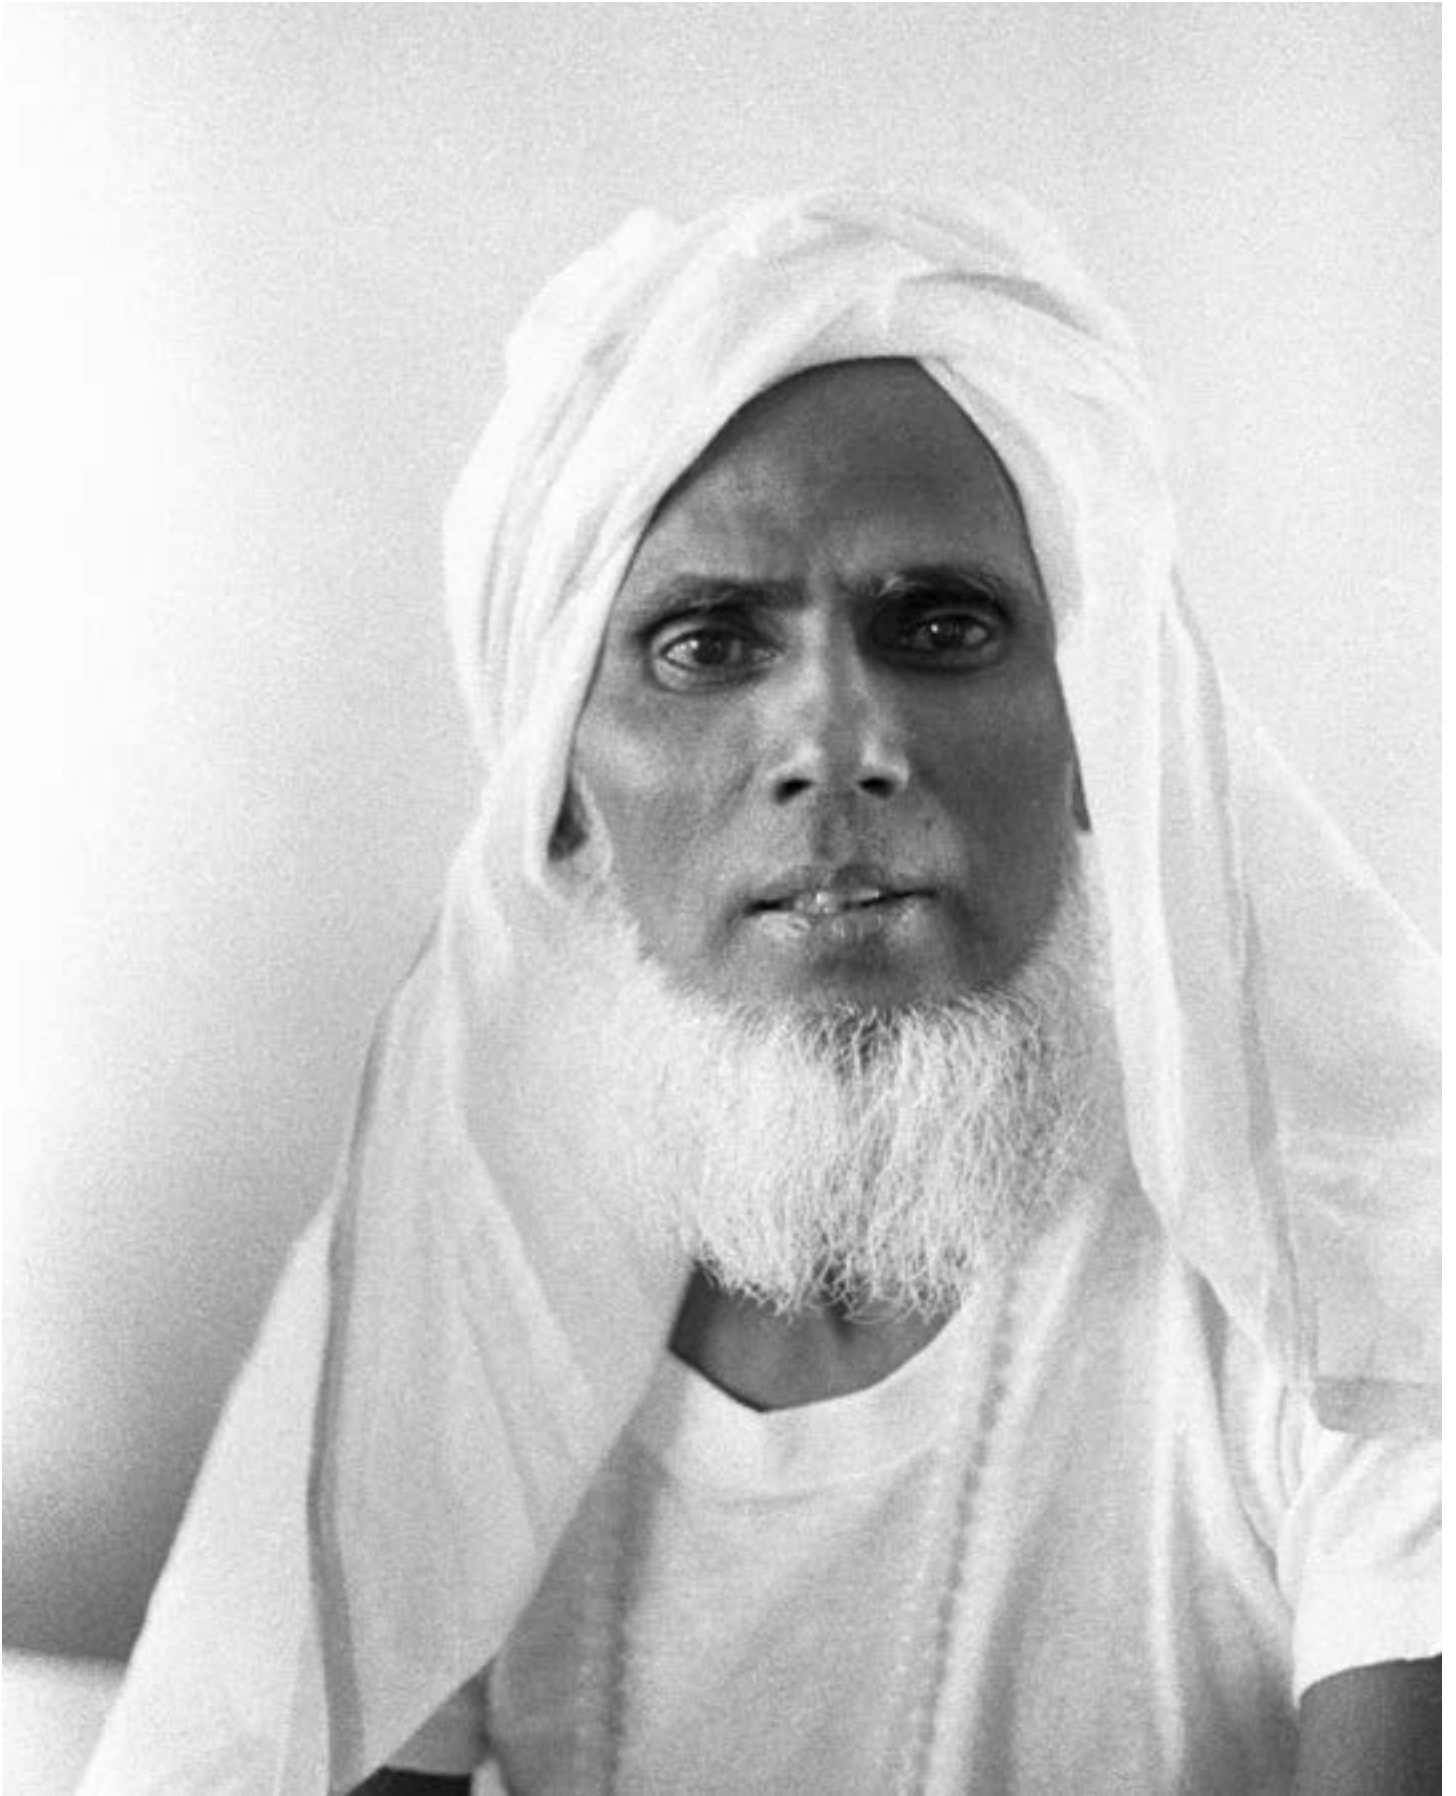

The light comes from wisdom as wisdom.

A child who is born from a state of love that melts and dissolves is a melting child that comes from God's melting. Children born from a heart melted by compassion are the children born from the heart of a righteous and true Shaikh.

That Shaikh abides as God's compassion. He gives his heart to God and receives the affection and the compassion of God. Becoming the clarity that emerges from wisdom, dawns from compassion, and emanates from love, the Shaikh places justice on that child's head and makes that duty the child's duty. The children whose duties are God's qualities are the children born from the heart of a Shaikh.

Those children are not born in the world, in this, or in that. Their entire focus is duty—doing what God does.
